

Making A Difference: The blog for Virology Down Under

By: Michael Diamond

Date : November 18, 2015

Pan-Access is steadily growing in popularity, and the benefits are already being seen. Researchers from around the world are choosing to provide their findings and progress in real time with no restrictions. By embracing this pan-access ideology, Drs. Ian M Mackay and Katherine Arden are two Australians who are Making A Difference with regards to global health.

With a focus on Ebola, MERS-CoV, Avian Influenza and more, their blog, Virology Down Under, provides detailed information and opinions on viruses: what they are, how they tick and the illnesses they cause.

Be a part of the Pan-Access movement. Join. Contribute. Make a Difference.

Take a closer look: The blog for Virology Down Under

ALSO: Public Health and Emerging Disease Outbreaks: Why Talking to the Community is a Good Idea by Ian M Mackay and Katherine Arden